Bed bugs are parasitic nocturnal insects that have been a human nuisance since pre-historic times.

Though they are usually found hiding in and around the mattress, box spring and frame of beds, bed bugs are very mobile and can hide in furniture, luggage, lamps, picture frames, curtains, even under switch plates and carpet edges.

Bed bugs have rebounded within the last decade due to increased international travel, pesticide resistance and lack of awareness.

Bed bugs feed on exposed skin, typically once per week for five to 10 minutes until they’re full.

An adult bed bug can survive up to ten months without feeding, and lives between five months and one year. A single bed bug can lay as many as 500 eggs in one lifetime.
